

Sunday, October 21, 2007

The New York Times invites your solutions to traffic congestion mitigation.

Keep NYC Congestion Tax Free offered some comments about the presentation of the question to The Times.

No doubt you can see through the slant.

You can use our Alternative Approaches for ideas. Please copy your suggestions to KeepNYCFree@gmail.com.

<http://www.nytimes.com/pages/nyregion/thecity/index.html>

Traffic on the Brain?

Everyone, it seems, has an opinion on the best way to ease Manhattan's perpetual traffic crunch.

Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg proposes congestion pricing. A group opposed to that plan suggests raising parking meter rates instead. Some bicyclists would ban cars. Some drivers would ban bicycles. There's probably someone out there who would ban pedestrians.

What are your ideas for treating congestion? E-mail them to thecity@nytimes.com, and we'll publish some of the best and most interesting, with expert comment.