

"Another Solution Bites the Dust"

Why isn't New York City using a tool first recommended by Keep NYC Congestion Tax Free and now authorized by the Governor and legislature?

It makes some think that they want to make more traffic tie-ups and new and more frequent pockets of congestion rather than use new tools that will not increase taxes?

Crains Insider - July 1, 2008

PlaNYC Agents Nixed

An increase in the number of traffic agents, called for in PlaNYC, was cut from the city budget approved Sunday. The agents were to patrol new bus lanes and ticket cars under the anti-gridlock law just approved in Albany. Previously, only police officers could write the tickets. Adding agents is now slated for fiscal 2010.