

The international organization representing more than 34 million European drivers found the Congestion Tax scheme operating in Stockholm and London “not to bring the expected relief,” in a statement released Friday, October 2. This just makes plain how misguided plans to use a congestion tax scheme remains. The New York Times also covered this development. See an excerpt below:

The New York Times
Green Inc.
Energy, the Environment and the Bottom Line

Bloomberg News

Pricing programs aimed at reducing congestion in cities like London and Stockholm don't work, a drivers' advocacy group said.

October 2, 2009, 10:22 am

Motorist Group Slams ‘Congestion Pricing’

By James Kanter

Pricing programs aimed at reducing congestion in cities like London and Stockholm don't work, a drivers' advocacy group said.

*****

“Demand management measures in the form of the congestion charging schemes, such as those implemented in cities like London and Stockholm, have on the longer term proven not to bring the expected relief,” the group said in a statement.

Read the entire article here.