

MIA?

Priorities matter.

Focus matters.

Choices matter.

Doing the basic job and doing it well may not garner accolades but it certainly tends to avoid stories such as the one below.

NYC's Department of Transportation needs to explain why it appears missing in action.

As Sunday's story makes plain it had prior notice.

Here's a thought: Instead of focusing on bike lanes and plazas, NYCDOT should focus more of its energies and attention on solving this and similar traffic problems.

After all lives matter a bit more.

http://www.nypost.com/p/news/local/queens/bridge_toll_mounts_BnzkZKNeV983gdvoRmSPyL

Updated: Sun., May. 15, 2011, 10:40 AM

Bridge toll mounts

By DOUG AUER, KEVIN SHEEHAN and HEATHER HADDON

Last Updated: 10:40 AM, May 15, 2011

Posted: 1:59 AM, May 15, 2011

A treacherous Queensboro Bridge offramp that has already claimed two lives was the scene of another spectacular crash early yesterday.

A speeding Volkswagen lost control on a hairpin turn at the lower-level offramp at about 5:30 a.m. on Queens Plaza South -- ping-ponging between barriers before it went airborne and landed on the roof of a parked livery cab.

The smashup took place at the exact location of two other Volkswagen crashes -- both fatal -- in the last two months. view [photos on the NY Post online site.]

Read more.