WIPE OUT

No money for toilet paper for Coney Island beach restrooms (or to keep some bus lines running in Brooklyn, Queens and The Bronx) but enough cash to plow and keep clear bicycle paths during that big blizzard last winter?

And the City even hit up boardwalk business for cash to open the rest rooms. Dianna Carlin, owner of the Lola Star Boutique told the New York Post that she “gave $1,000 but would've been better off buying $1,000 worth of toilet paper and dropping it off.”

Anyone find some priorities upside down here?

Perhaps someone forgot most NYC beachgoers don't necessarily maintain a home with their own private facilities on the shore.

NYC rationing toilet paper at Coney Island

Hey buddy, can you spare a square?
The city is so hard up for cash that it's rationing toilet paper in women's public restrooms -- to the point where bathroom attendants are doling out a few measly squares per patron -- along the world-famous Coney Island boardwalk.
